Energy of Tides.
The net electric energy to be derived from the British tides is placed by Prof. David Robertson at about 10,000 kilowatts per square mile for a double tide of 31.5 feet and 500 kilowatts for a tide of 7 feet. Places offering a large enclosed area with a comparatively short dam are the promising ones for tidal utilization and the British channel seems by far the most advantageous situation in the British isles, with the Firth of Clyde next.
